- 25X1X 1. the barracks installation on the east edge of Slupsk (Stolp - P 55/N 08) on the north side of the road to Globino (Gumbin - P 55/N 08) was occupied by Polish tank troops. Most of the troops accommodated in the west section of the installation wore blue-grey uniforms and a small portion of the troops wore khaki uniforms. Units wearing blue-grey uniforms repeatedly marched to a former stable building of the former Bluecher Kaserne where they picked up 15 to 20 T-34 tanks and drove to the training area east of the installation. about 15 trucks, occupied by soldiers with khaki uniforms, left the installation for practices. Between 10 and 15 canvas-covered guns and about 10 full-track vehicles, 3 to 4 meters long, which looked like small prime movers were seen in the barracks area. Source could not definitely state whether these weapons belonged to an artillery unit which had left the installation in September 1951. ¹
- 25X1A
- 25X1A 2. a large new four-story building which resembled the barracks installation and was located between the other barracks installation and the east edge of the town on the north side of the road to Globino, was nearing completion. The construction had started in September 1952. Additional construction material was shipped to the south side of the road across from the new building. No definite information was available as to whether the buildings would serve as barracks installations. ¹
- 25X1A 3. the buildings of the former Bluecher Kaserne on the south side of former Bluecher Strasse west of former Flassower Weg was occupied by Polish soldiers wearing blue-grey uniforms. Some of the stables of this old barracks installation had been converted into tank sheds. The units quartered in the installation practiced with tanks in the area east of the installation on the road to Globino. The tanks they used were parked in the east section of the quartering area. Two officers wearing Soviet uniforms were repeatedly seen in the area of the installation. ¹
